Waves Churn and Sailors Scrap for Precious Freight

There were storms on the humid river today - but not in the sunny sky. Two large crews of roustabouts, led by their ambitious captains, competed on the grassy wharf for precious freight. As the sun rose as high as the smokestacks on a new riverboat, the teams Organized the Freight. As they swapped labeled cards in a mass of pure chaos, some order did ensue when runners safely...if you don't count a few wipeouts on the slippery grass...deposited their cargo with the FBI. The Super Steamers shouted and raced to victory, but after an afternoon of remapping, the River Runners proved they are up to the challenge by scoring big in the Showboatin' contest. The creative lineup presentations from both crews made waves with the judging Port Authority Commissioners. After a delicious boat burger buffet from a servant-hearted Galley Gang, the hoard of sailors headed back to the wharf for a Deckhand Dash and to Bomb the Boilers. Dodgeballs and sailors were tumbling with dizzying speed. We can only guess that the contest will become more fierce as the competition continues Wednesday. Will the River Runners continue their crafty chase and pull ahead?

Preacher's Passage

In our morning chapel service, we were reminded that God relentlessly pursues pagans to be saved and wayward children to be restored to Himself. Sometimes God's people lose sight of God's plan, like Jonah. Jonah selfishly assumed that some people don't deserve to experience God's compassion. In contrast, during the evening service Pastor Tim showed us that a true servant of the Gospel will surrender what's best for themselves and seek what's best for others. Christ is our ultimate example of true servant-hearted sacrifice. As we imitate Him, we will demonstrate particular acts of servanthood that have spiritual intent, and not for accolades, or personal gain.

Does anyone in your cabin snore?

James Kuzmic: I don't know, I was asleep.

Grant Brazeal: Dunno. But Haddon Wiginton is WAY louder when he's awake than I realized.

Hannah Muller: Nope. But the smoke alarm went off in the night. A lot of my cabin slept through it. They weren't paying attention.

Luke Robertson: I do. But not very loudly.

Foodstuff Funnies...

David Schaedel achieved his personal goal today as the first customer at the snack shop. Both he and John Naselli confused the ice cream cone "drumsticks" with chicken. Mrs. Rush lost count of the, well, countless number of gigantic ice cream cones sold. The teens handled the treat well, but Commissioner Stegall returned with his cone and pleadingly requested a sink and a number of napkins.
